

I listen to K-love daily as well as my children. An alternative to commercial radio that follows the direction of the listeners rather than the commercial enterprise is important to me. I recently learned the FCC is considering allowing LPFM a priority over translator service. This is an unfortunate event that would allow individuals to bump translator service off the air on a whim. I believe that K-LOVE has provided service in the public interest by providing commercial free positive, encouraging music to millions of Americans. LPFM should fit within existing available frequency slots and not be allowed to bump existing services.
